WASHINGTON, D. C., JUNE 10, 1881.

A SCOOTER.

BY JOE PARKER. There's a silence deep, and a broading sleeps That over the drear earth steals: And the gentle buzz of the June bug's coz Through the orchard and meadow peals

At the garden gate, though it's rather late, Stand a youth and maiden fair: She is seventeen, and a little lean, And she bangs her nut-brown hair.

The old gate creaks as Maud's blushing cheeks Are kissed by two rose-red lips; Down the garden path, with a great big lath, A stern parent softly skips.

There's a scattered group, and a wild, wild whoop, And a swiftly moving boot: In the new spring pants see him madly prance, And away for the street cars-scoot.

THE MANIAC'S LOVE.

BY GINX.

He had never seen her or her photograph-had never heard of her; never had he loved her in secret. He was stone carth seeking for the idol of his heart. Ten years more passed, and still he sought her; but she knew river, watching the little fishes making fish-balls. She gazed wistfully at him with corns on her feet. | come up His ragle eye fell upon her, but she caught it before it reached the earth. He longed to press her to his bosom, but he could not stir, he was rooted in the ground; and the old man came out of the house and dug him up. But his heart ceased to heat-he was dead. Then she-she whom he adored approached softly, and, taking his hand, led him to the water's edge, and, as he gazed upon the beaudome of the Capitol, seized him around the walst and flung him far out upon the bosom of the gives. His heart sank-his head swam back to the He said never a word, but reproached her for her perfidious conduct, exclaiming: "Woman, for twice one hundred years have I yearned for

"Yearn on! yearn on!" she shricked. "I'll not gibb thee." His voice had sunk to a whisper, and he solded convulsively. Fire flashed from her eyes and ignited the powder on her face; it went off with a loud explosion and never came back. She was a corpse, but she did not mind it. She stooped and fondly caressed his feet-so large and strongand shed three bitter tears. He pulled an onion from his pocket and ate it; his voice became strong; he breathed into her car his tale of love. The recoiled as if bitten by a mosquito, and, fixing mon him a look of scorn, breathed her first. Seizing her by the throat, he severed her jugular vein, and in two minutes she breathed her last. He planted her, but she never grew any larger. Then he died, and that year butter went up to $1 a pound. Such is not life!

pecial Correspondence of THE REPUBLICAN.

Philadelphia, June 8.—The "City of Brotherly Love" is looking very pretty now, with er summer adornments of green trees and bright flowers. Business appears to be very brisk and the streets are thronged with eager shoppers, who seem to have plenty of money. Around the wharves and wholesale houses there is a rush of business, and everybody is intent on getting through with as much as is possible. In a few weeks the city will be pretty well thinned out by the exodus to the seashore and other summer resorts. Cape May and Atlantic City, being so convenient, have become the favorite resting-places for this population, and the number of passengers carried over the several roads leading to these places in the course of a season is almost incredible. There is knew her name-yet for twenty-eight years to be a Fourth of July celebration in the Permanent Exhibition Building, which is to be the iniblind, and had lost both legs in the battle of tial step in the bi-centennial demonstration to take Cold Harbor; but, undaunted, he wandered o'er the | place here next year. | Philadelphians rather pride themselves on their ability to get up a great jubilee, and refer with considerable complacency to the At last he met her. SO NOBLY TO THE WORK it would never have been the great success proved to be. Having heard of the fine markets ere I took a stroll through them this morning. The splendid joints of beef and fresh spring vegetables were very inviting, and the delicious rolls of butter maintain the reputation of Pennsylvania for producing the finest butter in the world; indeed, "Philadelphia print" has become the standard for first-class butter. In the fall of the year, when New Jersey and Delaware pour in their wealth of melons, peaches, and other fruits, these markets are unequaled anywhere. Washington is not the only city where life is made miserable by the din of the street venders, for they yell quite as loud here, and, to me, are far more offensive, for the shrill voices of women are added to them. The latter go through the streets with trays on their heads, screaming 'catfish" or "berries," whichever they may have for sale. Those of us who remember with disgust the days of immense hoops and voluminous skirts do not enjoy the prospect of THE REVIVAL OF THE FASHION, but it is coming. Already the counters of some of the establishments here are filled with the ungraceful things, and, although they are extremely small at present, when the fashion is once started there is no knowing where it will end, for the past has shown that it is only when a fashion has been run to the extreme that it ceases to be the fashion. Among other interesting places here I visited the mint, which is the largest and oldest in the country. The process of making the bright, beautiful coin, of which every one would like to have a generous share, is very simple, and one can follow the inetal, from the solid blocks of silver at the door, through the furnace-room, where it is heated to a liquid form and poured from red-hot ladles into moulds forming long strips, which, when cold, are to be rolled to the requisite thickness for the coin. In the cuttingroom these strips are cut into dollars, quarters, dimes, &c. From there they are taken to the stamping-room, where, in bright, massive steel machines, they receive the impress of the Govern-Latter-Day Saints," is meandering through the ment and become legal money. In the stampingroom they can turn out

The cost of this piece of mechanism was was discovered in flagrante delictu with the wife of one Lewis Brown. The latter attempted to shoot is very fine, and the museum has many visitors every day. In a conspicuous place there is a very old coin, labeled as follows: "Coined at the Philadelphia Mint two thousand years ago." The date is rather startling until one remembers that Philadelphia, Pa., is only the great great grand-child of another Philadelphia, which flourished among the hills and vales of Asia Minor thousands of years ago. The collection of foreign coins is very fine. I often wonder if the with intent to kill. time will ever come when the railroads radiating from Washington will be lined with beautiful villas and charming country homes, as the railroads are | The Official Transfers of Yesterday as Refrom this city. On the Pennsylvania Road, as far out as the Eagle, the ride is delightful, and one sees beautiful grounds and tasteful houses on all sides. The graveled drives in the afternoons are lively vah dashing turnouts. Drags, phaetous, chaises, and gadabouts follow each other in rapid succession, varied occasionally by some fair equestrian, attended by a devoted admirer. The winding Schuglkill also adds much to the beauty, with its jaunty little pleasure steamer and amateur boatmen in fancy costumes The latter are out in full force every fair afternoon during the season. There is very little going on here in the way of amusements. The opera season is over, and the theatres are presenting nothing

The Capital Bicycle Club has arranged a series of races to take place at Iowa Circle on the afternoon of Saturday, the 18th instant, when a number of wheelmen are expected here from Norfolk, Richmond, Philadelphia, Baltimore, and other points. like to take a little side issue upon the subject, "The Learned Man." While thanking "Mr. Churchman" for his effort against said "Learned Man," I wish to make a most essential correction in one of The official report of the Cumberland his statements. The True Principles of the Republican Party.

To the Editor of THE REPUBLICAN: Knowing your paper to be one in this country that unequivocally espouses the true principles of the Republican party, I solicit a short space in your columns to express a few sentiments concerning those principles in connection with the present rupture in the party. I am induced to do this-first, because a certain element is striving to bury those principles out of sight, and, secondly, because others are taking a bold stand to maintain them. It is under this consideration that I, as one of THE CLASS PARTICULARLY AFFECTED by these contrary views, would hereby undertake to set forth my opinions. It is evident that ultimately in the politics of this country either the true principles of the Republican party or those of the Democratic party must have a full, effective ascendancy. Such men as the noble Roscoe Conkling, such men as those who compose the illustrious 306 know that this is an incontrovertible assumption. There can be permanently no successful reign of Republican power by repeated inaugurations of conservative representatives. We are to EITHER ONE THING OR THE OTHER. We are to have either a Republican party standing upon its principles and ruling, or a Democratic party standing upon its principles and ruling. The Re-publican party is either to be radical and some thing, or conservative and nothing. Its tendencies toward conservatism are driving it onward toward destruction, for there can be no predominant conservatism in this party, and at the same time be a preservation of it, while it has to contend with a radical Democratic party. It is either to stand upon its principles, as it did in the Nation's crisis, and succeed, or ignore those principles and die. There is no possible way of evading this alternative. It cannot be done even by the sweet, PROMISSORY SPEECHES which are made during a campaign merely for the purpose of catching colored men's votes. The bestthinking ones of this class of voters, no matter how much they may smile at the different styles of caricatures upon such good men as Conkling, hold those men in the highest esteem, and raise for them their most fervent prayers. They know that their welfare in this country depends upon something more than mere nominal Republicanism, and that they are not in a much better condition with this cast of politics in the ascendency than they would be under Democratic rule. Now, let any one say what he may, this is true: That honesty, so far as it oncerns a Conservative and a Democrat, has its trongest manifestation on the latter's side. Hence the great mass of colored people in this country (although the Conservatives may not know it) are in strict accord with your straightforward sentiments, and are the most tenacious adherents to THE ILLUSTRIOUS REPRESENTATIVE of the true principles of American polities, Ulysses S. Grant. The world does not know how they love Now, so far as I am concerned, I am hoping and praying that the great friend of my people, Hon. Roscoe Conkling, will succeed in planting deeply the seeds of political righteous-ness, and in leading the members of the party up to the position he occupies to-day. I am praying (and that because I am a preacher, and no office-seeker) that God will nerve this great man to stand firmly by those essential principles for which he is contending until the mighty old Empire State shall be electrified by the honesty of his intent, and all the good people of the Nation shall see that he is the man to head in the next few years to come. In this very important contest, as learned and wise men know, there is something far weightier for consideration than the simple collectorship of the port of New York. Roscoe Conkling stands to-day as the distinguished defender of the life-giving principles of this Nation, and he must be so recognized in the next quadreunial term or—Democracy must succeed. JAMES H. A. JOHNSON.

Mischief in the Air.

We cannot analyze the ærial poisons that proluce epidemic and endemic diseases; but the valuable discoveries which have been made in vegetable pharmacy enable us to counteract their nalific influence. The most powerful known autidote to every species of malaria is Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, a pure botanical medicine, in which the finest anti-septics, tonics, alteratives, and stimulants of the vegetable kingdom are skillfully and effectively combined. At seasons of the year when the atmosphere is surcharged with miasma, and whenever the specific virus of any infectious disease is supposed to be present in the air, this famous corrective should be taken regularly as a protective. All who choose to observe this precaution may bid defiance to intermittent and remittent fevers, and, in fact, to all disorders generated by foul exhalations or impure water.

THEO. N. VAIL, General Manager.
This company is desirous of arranging with persons of responsibility to establish in their immediate locality District or Exchange Systems similar to those now in operation in nearly all the large cities of the country. By the adoption of this system an unlimited number of subscribers in any city or town, located on lines radiating from a common centre, can, by means of radiating from a common centre, can, by means facilities afforded at the Central Office, be put in i stant speaking communication one with another. This system is strictly local in its character, and does not contemplate the transmission of messages for its customers from one city or town to another.

The company also desires energetic and responsible parties to act as local agents for the following purposes: To arrange for where five or more subscribers can be obtained on a single telephone wire. This system will be found very convenient in the smaller towns and villages, where a District or Exchange System could not be maintained. To establish telephonic lines between cities and towns where the District and Exchange or the Club System is already in use, for the purpose of affording facilities for personal communication between the subscribers or customers of such systems. To estab-lish telephonic lines between outlying villages and the market or shire town, in order to furnish means for the transmission of messages between points not con nected by telegraph.

The American Bell Telephone Company directly, or through its regular agents, proposes to make a specialty of introducing the Telephone for PRIVATE LINE PURPOSES. connecting residences with places of business, residences with outbuildings, offices with manufactories, &c., &c. Also, to take the place of SPEAKING TUBES, to connect different parts of one building or detached buildings of any group. The system is especially applicable to large hotels, as it allows of instant speaking communication between the room of any guest and the office; or, if desired, it may be used for conversation between guests in different rooms. This feature can hardly fail to recommend itself, especially to the keepers of hotels and boarding-houses at places of supmer resort." of summer resort."

BOSTON, MASS., April 22, 1881.

GEO. C. MAYNAED is the only person authorized by us to supply Telephones for private lines, club lines, and speaking-tube lines within the District of Columbia. (Signed)
